

I. W. CHILDS LOSES HIS "LAST CHANCE" AND WIFE LEAVES

Brief Reconciliation Ends When He Advertises He Won't Pay Her Debts.

HE WAS 'ON PROBATION'

So Says Friend, Who Declares It's "All Off" Now—Mother Has Baby.

The Irving W. Childs have parted again and this time for good, it is close friends of Mrs. Childs are well informed. Mrs. Childs and her four-year-old daughter, Marjorie, left Mr. Childs at the Hotel Receptor, where they had been living a month, about a week ago, closely following the insertion by Mr. Childs of a newspaper advertisement, in which he stated he would not be responsible for any debts contracted by his wife.

This notice, it is understood, was inserted without the knowledge of Mrs. Childs. She departed from the hotel soon after it was brought to her attention.

"My wife left the hotel about a week ago," said Mr. Childs today, to an Evening World reporter. "She is now with her mother, who is in a sanitarium in this city."

Mrs. Childs's mother, Mrs. Westfall, is not in a sanitarium. She is at her home, No. 18 Stratford road, Flatbush. Nor is Mrs. Childs with her mother and members of her family ready to give her address.

Irving W. Childs is a son of the late William Henry Harrison Childs, of Brooklyn, a manufacturer, who left an estate of $200,000. The young man is twenty-five years old. In the four years following his arrival at his majority he spent $100,000 a year. A few months ago he got another lump sum of $700,000, which his wife succeeded in having tied up in a trust fund, but there is a liberal spending allowance for Mr. Childs.

ASKS HIS WIFE FOR MORE OF HIS OWN MONEY.

Gertrude Westfall married Irving W. Childs in March, 1907. In May, 1908, Mrs. Childs brought a suit for separation and won it. The court granted her an allowance of $500 a month for herself and the baby.

On his twenty-fifth birthday, March 25, 1911, Childs felt heir to his second inheritance, amounting to $700,000. Promptly his wife made application to have the money tied up to protect her interest and that of her child, Justice Blackmar of Brooklyn ordered the Franklin Trust Company to take charge of the $700,000.

The trust company put the brakes on Childs's allowance and she went to see his wife and ask her to allow him more of his own money. The couple became quite friendly, and on October 31 last they agreed to live together again. Their second honeymoon lasted until Dec. 5, when the advertisement appeared. Mr. Childs announced he had made his wife a big allowance and could not afford to pay her bills.

"Mrs. Childs went back to her husband," said one authorized to speak for her today, "in the hope that he would behave himself. It was his last chance, and he understood it. He did not take advantage of it, and his wife will not live with him again."

BOSTON CARDINAL'S ADIEU.

Pope Receives O'Connell in Farewell Audience.

ROME, Dec. 18.—The Pope today received Cardinal O'Connell in farewell audience, at which he again expressed his love for America, and assured the Cardinal that he was sure he had done the wisest thing for Catholicism in America by granting a larger number of Cardinals to that country. He said he knew the good work done by the Federation of Catholic Societies, of which he heartily approved. He said also that it must be a pleasure to work in a country where the relations between all parties and sects were so good.

Cardinal O'Connell leaves Rome on Wednesday for New York, in the vicinity of which city he intends to make an automobile trip.

Woman in Love May Give a Hint or Take One, But Propose? Old Dame Nature Forbids It

Copyright, 1911, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York World).

is an Immobile Stand-Patter and Will Never Permit Woman "to Take Advantage of Man's Timid, Clinging Nature" With "Please Marry Me."

Lecturer Cooke's "Woman Wooer" Far Behind Shaw's "Pursuer," but Yet Centuries Ahead of Nature's Plans.

NIXOLA GREELEY-SMITH.

"Women should propose marriage," declares Mr. George Willis Cooke, a lecturer of Boston. "The present dilemma and shyness of girls in love-making is a subterfuge," according to our latest social philosopher, "a part of the present social teachings. It goes back to the man. Among the Red Indians these qualities are exactly changed. It is the boy who is so-called modest, diffident and shy. For there he leaves his own home when married, just as the girl does here."

"Another reason why women should do the proposing is that they are getting better educated than the men, and, therefore, will select more intelligently. In time it will be the woman who will do the courting."

Of course, Mr. Bernard Shaw's unimpeachable theory that woman is now, always was, and ever will be the pursuer of the shy and elusive male is much more advanced than Mr. Cooke's little notion that some day, some where, women will propose. But undoubtedly Mr. Cooke's scheme will meet with more favor among women who go to lectures. It is not pleasant to be called a pursuer for how then can the unmarried feminine person explain herself except on the theory that she has never been able to persuade a man to marry her. Now there are many unmarried feminine persons at lectures, many doubtless who have achieved celibacy, but still grieve, and to these it must be very soothing and delightful to hear that some day, in a higher, fairer world woman will propose marriage.

As a matter of fact, she won't. In that millennium toward which we are tending women will still in Congress, a few even may develop financial ability of such a high order as to entitle them to Senatorial honors. Utmost, they, there may be a woman President. But never while women are women and men are men will the order of courtship be reversed.

MAY BE A FEW CASES, AS THERE ALWAYS HAVE BEEN.

Here and there, then, as now, there will be found a woman who will ask a man to marry her and then, as now, the man will be very likely to consent. For what could be more exquisitely gratifying to masculine self love than the realization that his charms of mind and person are such as to overcome that instinct of feminine reserve which he believes to be inseparable from the sex. If I were a man, I think I'd accept any woman that proposed to me, as a slight testimonial of my esteem for her nerves.

Granted, of course, that the reason usually advanced against a proposal by a woman is that the suggestion involves the request for lifelong support, as well as love and affection, and that we may change all that, particularly when particular lectures on the economic independence of women, "the parasitism of wives," etc., stop talking long enough to do some real work.

But the reasons which make men the wooer and woman the wooed are fundamental, physiological, as old as Nature herself. And Dame Nature, by the way, the most impervious, reasoner, the most impervious to reforms and the most formidable of all the old ladies who stand, like Mrs. Partington, with brooms in their hands to sweep back the tide of feminism.

There is no doubt that we shall get her partially before we meet her through. She may even live to cast her bait against Socialism, and utter appropriate sentiments about saving the city, as did the several newly emancipated centenarians in Los Angeles recently. But she will never consent to let ruthless woman take advantage of man's timid and clinging nature and the pressure of a cold and cruel economic dependence and make him an unwilling husband.

DAME NATURE CAN BE TRUSTED TO SAVE SHRINKING MAN.

No man pressing a lady hand to a throbbing brow will ever hear those fatal words, "You are bought and paid for" as an infuriated wife batters at the barred portals of his bedchamber. Even the perforce imagination of the male-donkey must stop there.

Yet, if women proposed, what would there be to prevent such a situation? Only old Lady Nature, who has decreed that man shall be the perpetual wooer and given to woman what is practically a veto power.

As many women proposed in the fifteenth century as will propose in the twentieth. And there is no doubt that the playrights, in the interests of a dramatic situation, have always encouraged their female characters to offer themselves in marriage. Rosalind proposed to Orlando. And the gentle and feminine Desdemona informs Othello that if he "has a friend that loves her he need not teach him how to tell his story, and

ACCORDING TO G. BERNARD SHAW WOMAN HAS ALWAYS PURSUED MAN.

SOME OF THE "SHY, ELUSIVE MALES" ON BROADWAY

THEY ARE ASKING THE "WHY?"

WHEN WOMAN PROPOSES

that would woo her." In a recent play, the ingenue shows the hero his own face in a looking glass as the portrait of the man she loves. And all these things are true to feminine nature. But women don't propose directly. Neither do men as a general thing. I know of one marriage which was brought about by a remark of the man as the girl with him stopped to look in the window of a furniture store. "How do you think that bookcase would look in our library?" Whereupon the very practical young lady began to plan the rest of the furniture.

It must be admitted that the average woman in affairs of the heart takes a hint very quickly, and gives one on occasion.

But propose? Never—three times never—that is, hardly ever!

KILLED BY A LONG FALL AMONG CROWD OF GIRLS.

Charles Normandsen Loses Life An Hour After Getting Job as Window Cleaner.

His plea for work so that he would be able to provide a Christmas dinner for his wife and several children secured today for Charles Normandsen a position as a window cleaner in the seven-story loft building No. 14 West Twenty-fifth street. An hour after he had commenced work his body was picked up in the street. He had fallen from the fourth floor and was instantly killed. Normandsen, who was twenty-seven years old, lived at No. 227 Gold street, Brooklyn.

The loft building is located a few doors from Sixth avenue and just now that locality is unusually busy. Hundreds of girls coming from the various loft buildings in the vicinity saw the man miss his footing and come hurtling downward, his feet and arms narrowly escaped being hit by the falling man. Several fainting spells and when Dr. Everingham of New York Hospital arrived with an ambulance his services were required by the girls.

Traffic was blocked in the neighborhood for a half hour. The policeman considered the best danger as well as the protest girl in Roosevelt. At the Guild's quarterly dances the youths always sought the honor of being her escort. Weeks ago they began calling her up on the phone, asking her to be sure and save them dances. There were so many requests that when she arrived at the hall last night, with Miles Brown, she found it would be impossible to give a whole dance to every one. So she agreed to divide some of the dances.

She whirled girls through waltzes after waltzes, always smiling and gracious. She never seemed tired, as she danced with one partner after another. But a with one partner before 10 o'clock Miles Brown, with whom she was dancing, felt her give a convulsive shudder. Her cheeks paled, and the next instant she staggered out of his arms and would have fallen had it not been that some of the other dancers caught her.

It was thought she had fainted from over exertion, but efforts to bring her to consciousness were useless. Dr. E. B. Bergen and Dr. Edward Carmon were called, but in spite of all they could do she died within an hour.

The dance was brought to a close with her seizure and several of her friends went to her home to break the news. Dr. Bergen declared Miss Carpenter had danced herself to death, the heart attack being brought on by over exertion.

TWO GIRLS HELD FOR THEFT.

Both Under Twenty. They Are Charged With Stealing Diamond.

Violent Emmery and Madeleine Hughes, girls under twenty years old, were arraigned in West Side Court today on the charge of having stolen a diamond ring worth $20 from Charles Ramon, a traveling salesman from South Carolina, at Jack's Restaurant.

With the girls was arraigned Charles Emmery of No. 24 West Forty-seventh street, in whose possession the ring was found when the police raided Emmery's home last night and found him there with the two girls. Emmery was held charged with receiving stolen goods. Bail for the trio was set at $1,000 each.

PRETTY GIRL FALLS AS SHE WALTZES, DANCED TO DEATH

Popular Caroline Carpenter of Roosevelt, L. I., Had Tried to Favor All the Boys.

Miss Caroline Carpenter of Roosevelt, L. I., nineteen years old and very pretty, was so popular with the young gallants at a dance of the Junior Guild of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in the Board of Trade Hall last night, that she had to split her dances. Suddenly, just before midnight, while she was waltzing with Miles Brown, she reeled from his arms and almost fell to the floor. Instantly other dancers stopped, rushed to her side and carried her to a retiring room. Two physicians were called, but she died without returning to consciousness.

Miss Carpenter, who was the daughter of an employee of the New York and Long Island Traction Company, was considered the best dancer as well as the prettiest girl in Roosevelt. At the Guild's quarterly dances the youths always sought the honor of being her escort. Weeks ago they began calling her up on the phone, asking her to be sure and save them dances. There were so many requests that when she arrived at the hall last night, with Miles Brown, she found it would be impossible to give a whole dance to every one. ## FIRE DRIVES 1,000 FROM THREE BIG CHICAGO HOTELS Blaze in Open Board of Trade Causes Panics at Kaiserhof, New Victoria and Stafford.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—Nearly 1,000 hotel guests were crowded in panic early today by a fire which totally destroyed the Open Board of Trade building, a five-story landmark at No. 221 South La Salle street.

Within fifteen minutes after the first alarm was sounded at 2:30 o'clock the flames had swept through the whole building. The roof fell in a few minutes after the arrival of the first fire companies.

Alarm was immediately felt for the guests in the Kaiserhof, New Victoria and Stafford hotels, all of which were near enough to be touched by the flames. The first two hotels face in Clark street and run to the alley directly across from the Open Board. The Stafford adjoined it on the south.

Belhays, elevator men and even the city firemen did heroic work in the hotels. Every room was visited and the guests awakened. The sight of the flames threw men and women into panic and there was a hurried scramble for clothing and valuables.

HOTEL LOBBIES FILLED WITH HALF CLAD GUESTS.

Scores of persons half clad rushed to the hotel lobbies, many dragging trunks or carrying suitcases. Although the window shades of the Kaiserhof were pulled down, a steady play of water always kept the building out of danger. No one was injured in any of the hotels.

Directly across from the Open Board of Trade in La Salle street stands the Chicago Board of Trade, with which the Open Board had no connection.

Fire Marshal Seydell estimated the total loss at $200,000. His only comment on the fire was that there would be a rigid investigation, hinting that it might have been of incendiary origin.

Within the building many labor unions had their headquarters. The books and records of many of these organizations are said to have been destroyed.

The fire was one of the most spectacular seen in downtown Chicago in months. Flames leaped more than 200 feet into the air, and firebrands were carried for blocks by the wind. An hour after it started the fire was under control.

After four hours hard fighting, the Fire Department declared there was no further danger to adjoining buildings. A report that three furnace stokers had lost their lives was found to have been untrue, all the employees of the building being accounted for.

The Open Board, which is an organization for transactions in small lots of grain and provisions, was only a few days ago cut off from receiving quotations of the regular Board of Trade, having been charged with counterfeiting operations in pots and pans, a form of business prohibited by the State laws. It was announced the Open Board would be opened in the Traders' building, next door.
